Dec 10 (Reuters) - Shares of Google parent Alphabet <GOOGL.O> rose about 5% on Tuesday after it unveiled a new generation chip that the company said helped overcome a key challenge in quantum computing.

Google on Monday introduced a new chip called Willow, which solved in five minutes a computing problem that would take a classical computer more time than the history of the universe.

Tech companies are chasing quantum computing in hopes of developing systems that perform at speeds far faster than traditional silicon-based computers.

The building blocks of quantum computers, called "qubits", while being fast, are error-prone, making it hard to ensure quantum computers are reliable and commercially viable.

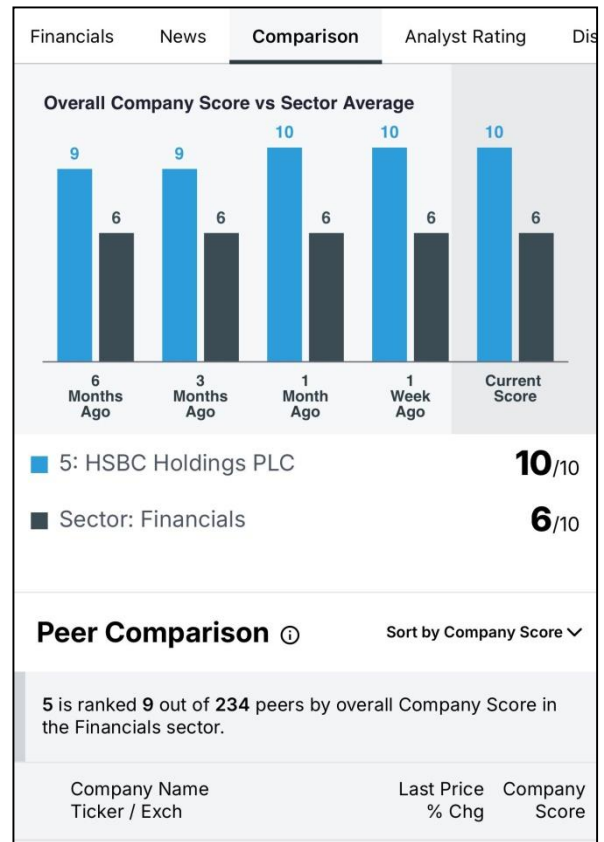

The more qubits used in quantum computing, the more errors typically occur. But Google said on Monday it found a way to string together qubits in the Willow chip so that error rates decline as the number of qubits rise, adding that it can also correct errors in real time.

"While (there are) no current uses, (Willow) will have major implications in science, medicine and

《經濟通通訊社11日專訊》畢馬威中國香港資本市場組主管合夥人劉大昌在記者會上指出，預計明年香港IPO集資額1000至1200億元，重返2022年水平，排名仍為全球首5名內。宗數、平均交易規模分別料升至80宗、15億元。劉大昌估計明年有多於3間大型A股來港上市，平均集資額逾50億元。

MARKET NEWS

China proposes "moderately loose" monetary policy after 14 years amid major shareholders reduce holdings in Tencent

Yesterday (9 December), the HSI rose 548 points to settle at 20,414 points. The HSCSI rose 224 points and closed at 7,360 points. The market turnover amounted to HK$206.530bn with 1,155 gainers and 572 losers.

The Hong Kong stock market rebounded amidst policy shift signals from China on Monday, with the HSI breaking through the 20,000-point mark. The Politburo meeting stated that a more proactive fiscal policy and a moderately loose monetary policy will be implemented next year in order to stabilise the property and stock markets. The meeting vowed to boost consumption and expand domestic demand. China's last round of "moderately loose" monetary policy was from the Political Bureau meeting of the CPC Central Committee in November 2009 to 2010, which means that the policy direction has changed again after 14 years. The HSI opened down 133 points. However, on the back of policy news from China, the market rebounded by 567 points, reaching a high of 20,433 points, and closing near the day's high. The Shanghai Composite Index of A-shares fell less than 0.1%. Mainland funds actively bought shares as the southbound trading of the Hong Kong Stock Connect recorded net inflows of nearly HK$2.7 billion. Wuliu AppTec (2359) and Wuliu Biologics (2289) both rose more than 9%, as the BIOSECURE Act of the U.S. is unlikely to be passed this year. Mobile phone equipment stocks continued to rise on expectations of central government subsidies for electronic products purchases. If the Index stays above 20,000 points, its upside targets will be near the downside gap formed in November at 20,700 and the high reached in mid-October of 21,600.

Overnight, the three major U.S. stock indices came under pressure, with the S&P 500 and Nasdaq retreating 0.6% from their highs. Software company Oracle (ORCL) reported second-quarter revenue up 9% yoy, slightly lower than market expectations, net profit was US$3.2 billion, up 22% yoy. After-market stock price fell more than 7%. Chip stocks were under pressure. Nvidia (NVDA) fell 2.6% as it was investigated for failing to comply with additional conditions for its acquisition of Mellanox and suspected of violating China's antitrust laws. Its peer Advanced Micro Devices (AMD) also fell 5.6%. A November survey by the New York Fed showed that U.S. consumers' average one-year inflation forecast was 3%. The U.S. exchange rate index reached a high of 106.21, the 10-year bond interest rate reached a high of 4.20%. The PBOC increased its gold holdings again after half a year. The spot gold price rose by 1%.

The ADR Hong Kong Stock Ratio Index closed at 20,827 points, 413 points higher than the Hang Seng Index's closing on Monday. The Nasdaq Golden Dragon China Index, which reflects the performance of large Chinese concept stocks, surged 6.5%. Brokers reported that regulators in China and Hong Kong have asked investment banks to help speed up the listing of Chinese companies in Hong Kong to strengthen overseas financing and revive the Chinese economy. South Africa's Naspers, Tencent (700)'s largest shareholder, reduced its shareholding ratio to 23.99% last Friday. Naspers Motors announced that the new SUV Xpeng Y01 is expected to be officially launched in June or July next year. ESR (1821) plans to spin off its logistics assets and list them independently on the Shanghai Stock Exchange. The final offering price is RMB 2.528 per fund unit, and the total proceeds are approximately RMB 2.102 billion.

Latest Politburo Meeting Vows Stronger Fiscal And Monetary Stimulus As Well As Unconventional Counter-cyclical Adjustments For 2025

On 9 Dec 24, the Politburo meeting vowed to "adopt an appropriately loose monetary policy next year", marking the first easing of monetary policy stance since 2012, and to "step up unconventional counter-cyclical adjustments". We expect that more supportive policies may be forthcoming. Policy levers may include LPR cuts, introduction of KPI to local governments and issuance of treasury bonds to support destocking.
